Andris Nelsons leads his first full subscription program as Boston Symphony Orchestra Music Director in three concerts Wednesday, October 1-Friday, October 3, featuring a diverse program of music by Beethoven, Bartók, and Tchaikovsky that showcases the range and virtuosity of the orchestra. The concerts begin with Beethoven’s Symphony No. 8, the composer’s most jubilant work in the genre, and continue with Bartók’s Suite from exotic ballet The Miraculous Mandarin, composed between 1918 and 1924. Bringing the program to a close in dramatic and profound fashion is Tchaikovsky’s beloved Symphony No. 6, Pathétique, a cathartic, powerfully emotional work that received its world premiere under the composer’s baton just nine days before his death.

PROGRAM DETAILS

Generally considered the composer’s most jovial work in the genre, Beethoven’s Symphony No. 8 was composed in 1811 and 1812, hot on the heels of the Seventh, which had caused a sensation and was still ringing in the ears of the early audiences of the Eighth. Consequently, the Eighth received a lukewarm reception, so different was its brevity and seeming simplicity compared with the scope and overt innovativeness of Beethoven’s previous three symphonies. But the Eighth is original in its own way, packing a prodigious amount of wit, ingenious craft, and simply thrilling music into its four relatively brief, classically proportioned, movements. Legend has it that when Beethoven’s pupil Carl Czerny asked the composer why the Symphony No. 8 failed to achieve the success of the Seventh, Beethoven replied, “because the Eighth is so much better.”

Bartók’s aggressive and lurid Suite from The Miraculous Mandarin captures the urban tension of post-World War I Europe with its brilliant orchestration and unique harmonic and melodic palette. The suite encompasses about two-thirds of the music from the composer’s original scandal-inducing ballet score about three thieves who attempt to use the provocative dancing of their female companion to attract and steal money from passers-by, including the strange, supernatural title character.

Tchaikovsky wrote his Symphony No. 6, Pathétique, in 1893. In connection with or because of his sudden, unexpected death so soon after the premiere, listeners and scholars have looked for a hidden program embedded within this symphony, especially one predicting his own demise. These searches are almost certainly in vain, as it seems Tchaikovsky had no more reason to suspect or desire his death than he had for most of his adult life. Still, the Pathétique is a searing, anguished work, constantly tugging at listeners’ emotions. Unusually but influentially, the composer ends the symphony not with a rousing finale but with a slow, lamenting movement that lends a sense of poignancy to the entire piece. The Symphony No. 6 is one of the composer’s greatest and best-known works.

EDUCATIONAL INITIATIVES AT SYMPHONY HALL
As part of the BSO’s ongoing initiative to enhance its patrons’ awareness and knowledge of the music being performed, the Boston Symphony Orchestra continues to offer a variety of adult education initiatives at Symphony Hall for the 2014-15 season.

UnderScore Fridays is a uniquely formatted concert series. At all Friday-evening performances, members of the BSO introduce the concerts from the stage. Selected concerts also include comments from the stage by guest artists appearing in the program. Tickets for UnderScore Fridays range from $32 to $130.

“BSO 101: Are You Listening?” returns in 2014-15. In this popular Wednesday-evening series, BSO Director of Program Publications Marc Mandel is joined by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for presentations designed to enhance one’s listening abilities and general appreciation of music by focusing on works from the BSO’s repertoire. No prior musical training, or attendance at any previous session, is required, since each session is self-contained. “BSO: 101: An Insider’s View” also returns in 2014-15, offering three Tuesday-evening sessions focusing on behind-the-scenes activities at Symphony Hall with BSO musicians and administrative staff, including player perspectives on performing with the orchestra. All “BSO 101” sessions take place from 5:30-6:45 p.m. at Symphony Hall, and each is followed by a reception. Though the “BSO 101” sessions are free, please note that there is a nominal charge for the reception. Full details of the 2014-15 “BSO
101” schedule will be announced at a later date.

The popular Friday Preview Talks continue to take place from 12:15-12:45 p.m. before each Friday-afternoon subscription concert; the Symphony Hall doors open at 11:30am. Given by BSO Director of Program Publications Marc Mandel, Assistant Director of Program Publications Robert Kirzinger, and occasional guest speakers, these informative half-hour talks incorporate recorded examples from the music to be performed. The BSO also offers talks before each of the season’s four Thursday-morning Open Rehearsals at Symphony Hall. These take place from 9:30-10 a.m. The Symphony Hall doors open at 9 a.m., and the Open Rehearsal itself begins at 10:30 a.m. Admission to the Friday Preview Talks and Open Rehearsal Talks is free of charge to ticket holders for the Friday-afternoon subscription concerts and Thursday-morning Open Rehearsals.
