Spanish conductor Juanjo Mena, chief conductor of the BBC Philharmonic, takes the BSO podium for four concerts Thursday, October 30–Tuesday, November 4 featuring eminent German violinist Frank Peter Zimmermann as soloist in Sibelius’s Violin Concerto—a pinnacle of the concerto repertoire and uniquely Sibelian in its alternately hushed and rhapsodic atmosphere. The concerts conclude with another pillar of the repertoire, Schubert’s Symphony in C, The Great.

PROGRAM DETAILS
Sibelius wrote just one concerto—the D minor work for violin and orchestra that begins this program—but that one work looms large in the composer’s catalog and is performed as much as, if not more than, any other music he wrote. Though the concerto is quite virtuosic—Sibelius was himself an accomplished violinist and bitterly regretted that he had taken up the instrument too late in life to become a world-class soloist—it displays the same organic fluidity and formal ingenuity as his symphonies, eschewing strict traditional structures for a freer, more organic idiom. Also like his most popular symphonies, it provides plenty of energy and excitement, as well as splendid, sweeping climaxes.

When Schubert died in 1828, he left behind numerous unpublished works, many of which had never even received performances. The manuscripts eventually ended up with Schubert’s brother Ferdinand, who sold off many of the smaller-scale works but paid little attention to the large-scale symphonic and choral works. Finally, in 1837, Robert Schumann persuaded Ferdinand to show him the remaining manuscripts, discovering among them The Great C major Symphony. “Who knows how long [it] might have lain buried in dust and darkness,” he wrote. The work finally received its long-overdue premiere (with cuts!) the following year under the baton of Felix Mendelssohn. Overflowing with hummable tunes and flowing lyrically from beginning to end, Schubert’s Great Symphony—so nicknamed to differentiate it from the much shorter and more modest Symphony No. 6, with which it shares its C-major key signature—is identifiably the product of history’s greatest composer of art song.

EDUCATIONAL INITIATIVES AT SYMPHONY HALL
As part of the BSO’s ongoing initiative to enhance its patrons’ awareness and knowledge of the music being performed, the Boston Symphony Orchestra continues to offer a variety of adult education initiatives at Symphony Hall for the 2014-15 season.

UnderScore Fridays is a uniquely formatted concert series. At all Friday-evening performances, members of the BSO introduce the concerts from the stage. Selected concerts also include comments from the stage by guest artists appearing in the program. Tickets for UnderScore Fridays range from $32 to $130.

“BSO 101: Are You Listening?” returns in 2014-15. In this popular Wednesday-evening series, BSO Director of Program Publications Marc Mandel is joined by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for presentations designed to enhance one’s listening abilities and general appreciation of music by focusing on works from the BSO’s repertoire. No prior musical training, or attendance at any previous session, is required, since each session is self-contained. “BSO: 101: An Insider’s View” also returns in 2014-15, offering three Tuesday-evening sessions focusing on behind-the-scenes activities at Symphony Hall with BSO musicians and administrative staff, including player perspectives on performing with the orchestra. All “BSO 101” sessions take place from 5:30-6:45 p.m. at Symphony Hall, and each is followed by a reception. Though the “BSO 101” sessions are free, please note that there is a nominal charge for the reception. Full details of the 2014-15 “BSO 101” schedule will be announced at a later date.

The popular Friday Preview Talks continue to take place from 12:15-12:45 p.m. before each Friday-afternoon subscription concert; the Symphony Hall doors open at 11:30am. Given by BSO Director of Program Publications Marc Mandel, Assistant Director of Program Publications Robert Kirzinger, and occasional guest speakers, these informative half-hour talks incorporate recorded examples from the music to be performed. The BSO also offers talks before each of the season’s four Thursday-morning Open Rehearsals at Symphony Hall. These take place from 9:30-10 a.m. The Symphony Hall doors open at 9 a.m., and the Open Rehearsal itself begins at 10:30 a.m. Admission to the Friday Preview Talks and Open Rehearsal Talks is free of charge free to ticket holders for the Friday-afternoon subscription concerts and Thursday-morning Open Rehearsals.
