French maestro Stéphane Denève, chief conductor of the Stuttgart Radio Symphony Orchestra and Brussels
Philharmonic and a frequent BSO guest, returns to Symphony Hall Thursday, March 17-Saturday, March 19, to lead the orchestra in three performances of a program featuring John Williams’ soaring and romantic Violin Concerto. Renowned American violinist Gil Shaham—who recorded the work with the BSO—joins the orchestra as soloist. The concerts also feature Pulitzer Prize-winning American composer Jennifer Higdon’s blue cathedral, which dates from 2000 and is her most popular work. Saint-Saëns’s dramatic, sonorous, and ultimately uplifting Symphony No. 3—the Organ Symphony—closes the program with brilliant orchestral display and a showcase of the grand Symphony Hall organ.
PROGRAM DETAILS
One of the most performed contemporary pieces of our time, Jennifer Higdon’s blue cathedral was commissioned in 1999 by the Curtis Institute of Music and is dedicated to the memory of the composer’s younger brother, who died the previous year. “The recent loss of my younger brother, Andrew Blue, made me reflect on the amazing journeys that we all make in our lives, crossing paths with so many individuals singularly and collectively, learning and growing each step of the way,” Higdon wrote in a note about the piece. Featuring solos for the clarinet, her brother’s instrument, blue cathedral is a study in magical orchestral color.

John Williams’s Violin Concerto, a soaring and heartfelt work championed by Gil Shaham, is dedicated to the composer’s late wife, the actress and singer Barbara Ruick, who had previously asked that he write a violin concerto. Though composed mostly in 1974, the piece was not performed until 1981. Williams revised the concerto in 1998, and Gil Shaham played the new version with the BSO that summer at Tanglewood under the composer’s direction. Williams wrote that the piece is “in three movements, each with expansive themes and featuring virtuosic passage work used both for effective contrast and display. The pattern of movements is fast, slow, fast, with a cadenza at the end of the first movement. Although atonal in style and technique, I think of the piece as lying within the romantic tradition.”

“I gave everything to it I was able to give. What I have here accomplished, I will never achieve again.” So wrote Saint-Saëns upon completing his Symphony No. 3, Organ, and indeed, the achievement of this work far eclipses that of the composer’s two previous symphonies as well as most of the rest of his catalog. Along with the famous extensive use of organ, the Third Symphony further displays the composer’s love for keyboard instruments with passages for piano, both two and four hands. Rich and Romantic, this piece is typical Saint-Saëns style raised to the maximum degree.

EDUCATIONAL INITIATIVES AT SYMPHONY HALL
As part of the BSO’s ongoing initiative to enhance its patrons’ awareness and knowledge of the music being performed, the Boston Symphony Orchestra continues to offer a variety of adult education initiatives at Symphony Hall for the 2015-16 season.

This season will introduce “Casual Fridays,” encouraging both patrons and the orchestra to come dressed in comfortable clothing. The three evening “Casual Friday” concerts in January, February, and March are priced from $25-$45 and will feature both a pre-concert reception and post-concert reception with live music until midnight. In addition, a limited number of iPads will be distributed to concert-goers with pre-loaded content related to the evening’s performance including music scores, program notes, and guest artist information.

“BSO 101: Are You Listening?” returns in 2015-16. In this popular Wednesday-evening series, BSO Director of Program Publications Marc Mandel is joined by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for presentations designed to enhance one’s listening abilities and general appreciation of music by focusing on works from the BSO’s repertoire. No prior musical training, or attendance at any previous session, is required, since each session is self-contained. Each of these “BSO 101” sessions takes place from 5:30-6:45 p.m., and each is followed by a free guided tour of Symphony Hall, as well as a reception offering beverages, hors d’oeuvres, and further time to share thoughts with other attendees. Though the “BSO 101” sessions are free, please note that there is a nominal charge for the reception. Full details of the 2015-16 “BSO 101” schedule will be announced at a later date.

The popular Friday Preview Talks continue to take place from 12:15-12:45 p.m. before each Friday-afternoon subscription concert; the Symphony Hall doors open at 11:30 am. Given by BSO Director of Program Publications Marc Mandel, Assistant Director of Program Publications Robert Kirzinger, and occasional guest speakers, these informative half-hour talks incorporate recorded examples from the music to be performed. The BSO also offers talks before each of the season’s four Thursday-morning Open Rehearsals at Symphony Hall. These take place from 9:30-10 a.m. The Symphony Hall doors open at 9 a.m., and the Open Rehearsal itself begins at 10:30 a.m. Admission to the Friday Preview Talks and Open Rehearsal Talks is free of charge free to ticket holders for the Friday-afternoon subscription concerts and Thursday-morning Open Rehearsals.
