The BSO welcomes the return of Spanish conductor Juanjo Mena— a familiar guest in the years since his 2010 debut with the orchestra—for four performances of a diverse program Thursday, January 31–Tuesday, February 5. Haydn’s Symphony No. 44, Trauer, which opens the program, is as dark—by Haydn’s standards—as its nickname suggests, but is followed by one of the most dazzling, diamond-bright works in the repertoire—Mendelssohn’s Violin Concerto, with Lithuanian violinist Julian Rachlin as soloist. The remainder of the program is dedicated to music by Janáček—first, the Suite from the composer’s charming yet poignant opera The Cunning Little Vixen, and the rousingly boisterous Sinfonietta.
PROGRAM DETAILS

Haydn’s Symphony No. 44 dates from 1772, when the composer was nearing the end of his so-called “Sturm und Drang” (“Storm and Stress”) phase, during which his music was characterized by expansive, brooding, and tumultuous modes of expression. Nicknamed “Trauer,” or “Mourning,” the symphony is particularly somber, especially the Adagio third movement, which Haydn requested be played at his funeral. Unlike most minor-key works of its time, it not only begins in the minor mode but also ends in it.

Although Mendelssohn was just 36 years old when his Violin Concerto received its premiere in 1845, he was already tremendously accomplished and firmly established as one of the world’s finest composers, conductors, and pianists. (Indeed, this concerto would sadly turn out to be his last large orchestral work; he died two years later.) Among the many advantages and privileges he enjoyed from his exalted status was a superlative ensemble with which to rehearse, refine, and perform his new works—the Leipzig Gewandhaus Orchestra, which he took over as conductor and manager in 1835. One of his first acts as leader of the Gewandhausorchester was to appoint his friend, renowned violinist Ferdinand David, concertmaster, a favor David repaid handsomely through years of correspondence and collaboration with Mendelssohn on this concerto. A brilliant and buoyant virtuosic tour-de-force, the Violin Concerto exemplifies Mendelssohn’s particular brand of magic and is a cornerstone of the violin repertoire.

The program concludes with two works that contain some of Leoš Janáček’s finest music. The first, the Suite from The Cunning Little Vixen, brings the composer’s captivating orchestral paintings of nature from that opera—in which most of the characters are animals—into the concert hall, including sections that depict the forest, a mosquito, a frog, the eponymous fox, a dragonfly, and a coop of chickens. Bringing the concerts to a close is the Sinfonietta, a brash, exhilarating work dedicated to the Czechoslovak army. The composer wrote that the music was a hymn to “contemporary free man, his spiritual beauty and joy, his strength, courage and determination to fight for victory.” Calling for, and giving a central role to, a large array of brass instruments, it begins with a stirring fanfare and retains an energetic, rousing tone throughout.

Educational Initiatives at Symphony Hall

As part of the BSO’s ongoing initiative to enhance its patrons’ awareness and knowledge of the music being performed, the Boston Symphony Orchestra continues to offer a variety of adult education initiatives at Symphony Hall for the 2018-19 season.

This season will continue the popular “Casual Fridays” program, which encourages both patrons and the orchestra to come dressed in comfortable clothing. The four evening “Casual Friday” concerts on November 2, February 22, January 11, and April 12 will feature both a pre-concert reception and post-concert reception with live music until midnight. Each evening also features special Conductor Cam seating, which allows patrons to watch the conductor from the orchestra’s perspective on high-definition screens. During the 2018-19 season, the BSO will continue to collaborate with the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT) to offer concert attendees sitting in the Conductor Cam seats access to ConcertCue, an innovative app that presents contextual program notes and images on concert-goers’ mobile devices in real-time during the musical performance.

BSO 101 returns in 2018-19, again offering the opportunity to increase your enjoyment of BSO concerts. These free Wednesday sessions with BSO Director of Program Publications Marc Mandel and Associate Director of Program Publications Robert Kirzinger, joined by members of the BSO, are designed to enhance the audiences listening abilities and appreciation of music by focusing on upcoming BSO repertoire. These sessions take place from 5:30-7 p.m. at Symphony Hall; in addition, each session is followed by a free half-hour tour of Symphony Hall. Click here for more information.

The popular Friday Preview Talks continue to take place from 12:15-12:45 p.m. before each Friday-afternoon subscription concert; the Symphony Hall doors open at 11:30 a.m. Given by BSO Director of Program Publications Marc Mandel, Associate Director of Program Publications Robert Kirzinger, and occasional guest speakers, these informative half-hour talks incorporate recorded examples from the music to be performed. The BSO also offers talks before each of the season’s four Thursday-morning Open Rehearsals at Symphony Hall. These take place from 9:30-10 a.m. The Symphony Hall doors open at 9 a.m., and the Open Rehearsal itself begins at 10:30 a.m. Admission to the Friday Preview Talks and Open Rehearsal Talks is free of charge to ticket holders for the Friday-afternoon subscription concerts and Thursday-morning Open Rehearsals.

BSO Media Offerings
The Boston Symphony Orchestra’s extensive website, BSO.org, is one of the world’s largest and most-visited orchestral websites, receiving approximately 10 million visitors annually and generating over $134 million in revenue since its launch in 1996.
